MINING IN CONGRESS

THE CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTORY just issued, publishes, among other valuable information, the composition of the various House and Senate committees. One interesting feature is revealed in the mines and mining committee, with a membership of fourteen, has but one representative from the metal mining region of the west, Mr. Welling of Utah. Nevada is not represented at all owing to the fact that there are no Republicans from this state which aspires to rank of third place in metal production. Pennsylvania and New York have three members, Illinois two and the others come from West Virginia, Kentucky, Texas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Missouri and Oklahoma. It is evident that the theory on which this committee was made up was based on the idea that coal mining represented all that was to be considered in this direction. For this reason the large majority of the committee is taken from the coal mining regions, leaving the western metal mining regions practically unrepresented on a committee that is in absolute control of legislation dealing with this industry.

Coal mining and metal mining are in altogether different categories and, if practicable, two entirely separate committees should be set up, one dealing with legislation affecting the metal mining industry. As matters now stand, the eastern representatives, who have the interest in metal mining can easily outvote the west on any proposition which may be for the particular benefit of this of the country.

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE.

ONE IMPORTANT STEP in the promotion of the electric transportation line serving the Divide district with the terminal in Tonopah was taken yesterday. The Public Service Commission improved the last few hours they spent in camp by adding to their stock of information concerning the necessity for this line. They went out in charge of Governor Joseph H. Hutchinson, who is personally interested in construction of the road. The commissioners were taken to the outlying mines in the making and shown the necessity for an early improvement in methods of transportation that the cost of the various companies be reduced to the minimum. They were not interested in developments or tonnage prospects of the Tonopah Divide, which, in the natural course of events will have its own reduction plant as soon as the water level is reached at a depth of 800 feet. This would solve one of the chief problems of mill construction and it is understood that there is not the slightest hesitation on the part of the Wingfield-Brougher management in affirming the intention to sink to water of which there is no doubt they will find in abundance. The commissioners were chiefly interested in ascertaining to what extent the smaller companies would be served and at the conclusion of their inspection it was understood that they appreciated the public spirit of the promoters in providing amply for the convenience of these junior companies. At first it appeared there was a suspicion that the suburban project was conceived with the intention of competing with the existing line but a careful study of the maps and the surveyed route which is plainly marked by surveyors flags convinced the commission that the company was entering a new field which would help the steam railroads in building up business. The next object was consideration of what the effects would be on milling plants now in operation which would welcome the additional tonnage as a means of keeping down their overhead and through operating to capacity the whole year round. Once more the men behind the project proved their foresight by establishing the fact that the electric line would serve to build up and not destroy any investment already made. In the first place the line would enable workmen to preserve their homes in Tonopah, enjoy all the advantages of city life, give their children the benefit of fully appointed schools and otherwise contribute to making Tonopah the great industrial center of the state. Men would be carried back and forth from their work in the shortest possible time with as much facility as they would reach places of employment in any of the large cities at a very small expense. Instead of depreciating land and house values here the effect would be to stabilize rentals and induce capital to come in and build for future development and preclude the possibility of a rival town springing up in the midst of the mines. There would be no disruption of family ties and the men whose savings are invested in homes would find they would be the chief beneficiaries. All these ideas were discussed and, from the remarks of the visitors it is believed there will be no objection to granting the liberal franchise which a majority of the property owners of Tonopah are urging on the county and state boards which have to pass upon their application.

As a homebuilder the electric line would be an invaluable adjunct to Tonopah for its construction would mean to this city what the electric lines meant to the workers of the Cripple Creek district or the steam suburban line means to the Ely district. The line would make for permanency of this camp and eliminate the prospect of adding more ghost cities to the landscape of the desert country.

ANOTHER KIND OF DEMOCRAT.

IT HAS REMAINED for Representative C. B. Hudspeth of Texas, a rockribbed Democrat, to call attention by way of contrast to the difference between the vigorous policy of Grover Cleveland with reference to the treatment of American citizens in Mexico and the invertebrate policy which has obtained for years under the present administration and which is still being followed. Mr. Hudspeth advocated the resolution of Representative Emerson of Ohio, Republican, directing the secretary of War to use military force in protecting the lives and property of citizens of the United States in Mexico. "On June 18, 1886," said Representative Hudspeth, "an American editor by name of A. K. Cutting was imprisoned in Juarez, Mexico, charged with defaming a Mexican citizen. He was denied bail and on July 20, 1886, he was brought before a judge in Juarez and sentenced to one year in prison and to pay a fine of $600. The secretary of state of the United States, one Thomas F. Bayard, on July 22, 1886, wired the United States ambassador, Mr. Jackson, at Mexico City, the following message:

"You are instructed to demand of the Mexican government the instant release of A. K. Cutting, a citizen of the United States, now unlawfully in prison at Paso Del Norte."

"On July 26 Mr. Jackson wired Secretary Bayard that his demand had been denied. Immediately the president of the United States ordered General Stanley, commander at San Antonio, Texas, to proceed with his troops to El Paso. The president of the United States further ordered that unless the American citizen Cutting was placed on the international bridge at noon on the 18th day of August that his guns, planted conveniently on the hills north of Juarez, would fire upon the town and his troops would enter the said town and Mexico be taught a wholesome lesson. The Mexican government said that this government was not to be longer trifled with, and before noon on that day A. K. Cutting was released."

AMUSEMENTS

TOM MIX IN REAL THRILLER TODAY

The "two-gun man" of the bad, bad west must take a back seat, because the "three-gun man" has made his appearance. In the old shooting days any man, outlaw or otherwise, who could operate two six-shooters simultaneously was regarded with considerable respect, and he lived longer than the fellow who could shoot accurately only with one hand. Tom Mix, the William Fox star, was a two-gun man when he was a Texas ranger and cowboy, and his ability to shoot with both hands got him out of some very tight holes. It was this ability, too, which helped him to wipe out the Shonts gang of outlaws on the Pecos river in New Mexico a few years ago. Now Tom Mix who for some time has been engaged in thrilling motion picture audiences by his daring horsemanship and athletic feats, has developed into a "three-gun" man. In "Hell Roarin' Reform," which will be shown at the Butler today, numberless thrills are promised, which is declared to be the liveliest western drama in which the dare-devil cowboy has ever appeared. He rides his horse up two flights of rickety stairs. Leaps, horseback from a porch to a nearby roof. Plunges his horse through the roof to the floor below. Rout a gang of stage robbers by working three guns simultaneously. Stops a runaway stage coach, and numerous other hair-raising stunts. This is one of Tom Mix's very best pictures. Added to the feature will be a Mutt & Jeff comedy, Pathe News and Ford Educational Weekly. A fine program. Tomorrow, Constance Talmadge, in "Good Night Paul," a comedy drama that hits the bull's eye.

GIVE DIAMONDS FOR WHISKEY

(Correspondence Associated Press)
LONDON, July 31.—Three silver fox skins for which $2500 had been refused in London were obtained in Archangel for six bottles of whiskey by a British officer, who just returned from northern Siberia. Another officer traded a case of champagne for a diamond necklace. Said to be worth thousands of dollars. Returning soldiers say the natives will trade any possessions for intoxicants.
